A Fresh Perspective

Ko and I are visiting Dwight and Kristi enjoying our time immensely. It is a blessing to see how God is using the kids; He has given them wisdom, talents and strength.

Dwight and Kristi graciously met us in Tucson. On the way down to Huatabampo we had an "Event" in Caborca – a three-hour evening session! Eighty men and women (not counting the children) arrived from 22 different churches!!! One fan. They drank up every word that was spoken. Mike Kangas came down from Oregon for this special meeting and they treated him like a statesman. They clapped long and loud when he finished and then Kristi went ahead with the training session. It is a heart-thrill to see so many people crammed into a church who want to learn and share what they have learned. So many people from different churches! As soon as "the service" started a whole row of women donned lace head coverings. Each church received enough curriculum materials for their particular churches for the next ten weeks; they smiled and seemed so pleased.

This week a team from Nevada and Oregon and are here to help where needed and are putting a roof onto the arches that are the entryway to the plaza-to-be. Think southern California Spanish missions. They are also putting the most recent curriculum on the 'Sermon on the Mount' and Proverbs together.

Today one of the pastors from up North, Pastor Alfonzo, and family arrive. He has had a marvelous awakening in his church. The church has been praying at 5 a.m. every morning for over a year now. Tomorrow he will put on a pastors conference as well as an outreach in a stadium in the evening. Dwight and Kristi designed and printed flyers. "Kristina" (as she is known down here) and I took most of one day to hand them out to each of the churches around here. They all wanted to visit. Kristi is really amazing with the pastors and wives; her warmth engulfs them; I saw her encourage them and they became sponges. The office here is busy with the pastors and families who come in daily (I mean "daily.") Talk about interruptions!

Here at Rancho Pro-Vision there is also the water issue – or lack thereof! The super-sun; the dust, the wind; the dirt like sand that the wind blows; did I mention the sun? This combo makes marvelous sunsets – oh yes! The stars; I'm sure there are more down here than up North. Ko's idea of this landscape is that God ran out of materials. I have fallen in love with the lovely Christian Mexicans; they are warm like the phenomenal early morning and late evening. The children can ALL be put into a box marked "Beautiful." More is happening next week and the next, but my feeble body and mind cannot hold more than this right now. What a wonderful experience this is. One day at a time.

Note from Dwight

What an amazing month this has been, with lots of visitors (we haven't had many all year) and Kristi finishing the new curriculum! I'm really enjoying having my parents here for a couple of months, and we also enjoyed seeing Kristi's dad, Mike Kangas for a few days. We were blessed this past week with a team led by pastor Lon Smith from Garderville, Nevada.

The Nevada team has built us some permanent shade in front of our house as well as printing and processing the new curriculum. The work looks great! (and we would have not gotten the office work done without their help.) Thanks guys!!!

The new curriculum is a hit! We gave it out for the first time last night here locally. Our little event in Huatabampo drew representatives from 20 churches and we gave out materials for 700 kids!

Kristi and I are thrilled with our lives and ministry here in Mexico, and are so very grateful to every one of you that is praying for us and supporting us in any way to make this all possible. You are a part of the labor and fruit. Thanks!
